CONTEMPORARY BRITISH WATER COLOURS

SINCE the earliest days of its practice in the middle of the 18th Century until the present day, water colour painting has always been a peculiarly British heritage and achievement. The earliest masters, Sandby, Cozens, Varley, Turner, Cotman, DeWint, Girtin, Bonington and David Cox, to mention only a few, are among the most distinguished artists the British School of painting has ever produced and they have been succeeded by a vast number of workers in this delicate and lovely medium, which has included in its ranks most of the outstanding artists of the 19th and early 20th Centuries.

This exhibition of Contemporary British Water Colours, which is undoubtedly the finest ever seen in Canada, cannot therefore fail to be an interesting one and, including as this one does the work of practically all the most distinguished water colour painters of our day, it provides a standard by which the modern and contemporary achievement may be judged.

It is extremely interesting to note how strongly Canadian artists have taken to water colour painting during the past few years and how remarkably they are adapting it to their expression of the natural characteristics of the country.

It is hoped that the exhibition, which has been arranged in co-operation with the Art Exhibitions Bureau of London, will be seen in all parts of Canada before its return. All the works are for sale.

The Art Gallery is indebted to The National Gallery of Canada at Ottawa, who were instrumental in arranging for this exhibition.
